2	BU covers a wide area and the main campus serves around 4,000 students and more than 600 faculty and staff. As there is a food technology program being offered in the university, college canteens and cafeteria could be opened in different parts of the campus to give better and more nutritious food to the university community and would also be an avenue for students to practice their learnings from the Food Technology program. At the same time, a Canteen or Cafeteria would provide a more conducive place for eating.	The University provides facilities for food services in different parts of the University such that students, personnel, and visitors have a conducive palce for eating. As of October 2024, there are 46 tenants/canteen operators and mobile food service providers (BUCS-17; BUCE-2; Main-5; BUIPESR-3; BUCEng-7; BUCBEM-9; BUCSSP-3) that provide nutritious and affordable food for students, personnel, and other stakeholders. Moreover, although there is a food technology program in the University, The Bachelor of Science in Food Technology (BSFT) at the College of Industrial Technology is designed to focus on food science, food processing, and safety, rather than on food service or commercial food retailing. The BSFT curriculum emphasizes theoretical knowledge and applied research in food production, quality control, and technology rather than skills or training in running food service establishments.	1) List of available Canteens in the West, East, and Daraga Campuses; 2) Justification why the BSFT program is not recommended to operate canteens/cafeteria.
